

Question:

How do I get another copy of Cubase?

Answer:

If you're inquiring about the Cubase or other bundled software with your Lexicon Interface:

Lexicon partnered with a company called Steinberg who develops and supports the CuBase Digital Audio Workstation (or DAW for short) software. It is not our product nor do we support it. Additionally, we unfortunately do not have the ability to send any CD/DVD discs or software bundled downloads for new or used Lexicon products bought aftermarket, nor do we have any way to lookup old CuBase activations and are we unable to generate new ones.

Steinberg may be able to help recover your old activation however, try contacting their support here:

Keep this in mind: You are free to use the Lambda with any DAW that is available on the market. CuBase is not necessarily required - we have only partnered with Steinberg to offer a "Lite" and limited version of their CuBase software to get people introduced to Digital Recording. Their hope being you purchase a full version of their software, which you can still do so if you choose:

Visit their site here: <https://www.steinberg.net/en/products.html>

As an alternative:

Cakewalk is now free, and a full version DAW with no limitations, and can be downloaded here - <http://www.cakewalk.com/>

HOWEVER - We can offer you the free MPX-i Bundled Reverb plugin that comes with the Lambda – download here:
